Effective Collaboration: Making the Most of Your Time and Expertise

At the 2014 National AfterSchool Association Annual Convention, Kate Gifford and Karen Peterson of EdLab gave the presentation Collaborative An Innovative STEM Programming for Girls. Here, they elaborate on some of the most powerful ideas from their presentation.

Speed Networking was one activity suggested by Gifford and Peterson, who asked participants to briefly list their resources (what they had to share) and then invite others they wanted to meet that night and give participants ten minutes each to share.

The obvious thing about Speed Networking is there are always examples of participants making valuable
